After checking all 13 best chew toys in the market, it can be a bit of a head-scratcher to pick the perfect one. Nobody wants to get a toy that might do more harm than good. To keep things simple, we rounded up a list of factors that we expert dog trainers at Suburban K9 recommend you keep an eye out for when snagging the best puppy teething toy.

What Dog Experts Want You To Look For When Buying Chew Toys For Your Puppy

If you are on the lookout to buy the most suitable chew toy for your teething puppy, here is a dog expert's point of view to help you out.

I. Material Safety

Knowing what material you are getting is of utmost importance. Chew toys are meant to stay in the mouth for hours. The slightest of non-toxic elements and imagine what it could do to your dog's health.

Got jittery just thinking of it? Don't be. Use that energy to know what you are getting is 100% natural. Also, check if the toy has been tested and approved by safety organizations to make sure it meets quality standards.

II. Size & Shape

If you want your dog to love the toy, you have to be precise about the sizing. If the product says the toy can be used for 6 months, follow the instructions. Don't buy even if your puppy is 6½ – no matter how cute or perfect it seems. Similarly, the shape should be convenient to fit in the mouth or your dog won't care how many bucks you spent on it. It would simply reject the toy.

III. Entertainment Value

So you are getting a chew toy for your dog to curb boredom other than meeting its chewing needs, right? A chew toy with high entertainment value should captivate your puppy's interest, providing mental and physical engagement.

Look for toys that have textures, flavors, eye-catching colors, or other interactive elements like squeakers or food dispense. Obviously, you won't find a toy with all of these elements. You choose the entertainment that clicks with your pupper the most.

IV. Softness & Durability

Unlike adult teeth, a young puppy's teeth and gums are tiny and sensitive. So you want a chew toy that's comfortable for them. But at the same time, puppies are like little chewing machines, so that toy should also be built tough to withstand their relentless chomping. Look for toys that strike that balance between being soft on the mouth and strong enough to handle some serious puppy power.

V. Age & Breed Suitability

Not all puppies are the same. Different breeds have different chewing tendencies and their age plays a big role too. For instance, a teething Labrador puppy might need something different than a full-grown Chihuahua. So when you're shopping, take your pup's age and breed into account to make sure the toy is just right for them.

Conclusion

Don't let those new Jordans become your puppy's gourmet meal. Instead, give them an all-in-one chew toy that would satisfy their chewing needs and keep them engaged for hours to ward off destructive behavior.

Remember, your dog is going to chew. It's a part of their doggy DNA. So you know what they say if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. And one of the best ways to join in on the fun is to give them the best chew toys for puppies.
